Her History as the Petite Henrietta Hodson-Her Marriage with Pigeon and its Unhappy Turn-Her Life as Mrs. Labouchere, &c., &c.

the refrom:

The legal revelations recently made in America through Richmond correspondents justify the publication of a few items that are within my knowledge in reference to the extraordinary divorce suit which Mrs. Labouchere, otherwise Mrs. Pigeon. In a first in the America Miss Henrietta Hodson, as a girl, was a member of the stock company of the old Theatre Royal at Bristol. She played chiefly in a burlesque, and was the eleverest Aladdin in H. J. Byron's piece I remember to have seen. Miss Marie Wilton (Mrs. Bancroft) was the original, I believe, on its produce in the Strand Theatre, London. Miss Hodson is the daughter of professional parents of the highest respectability, and during her association with the Bristol company she must have seen the first efforts of the Terrys, the Rignolds, and Mrs. Kendall (then Madge Robertson), who all began their artistic careers in the famous western city. Miss Hodson was petite, pretty, exceedingly graceful as a daacer, and sang burlesque ditties with much taste and charm of manner. It is known that she might have made a most advantageous match had she desired to marry, but the Bristolian idea was that she preferred the control of the stock company of the old Theatre Royal at Bristol. She played chiefly in a burlesque, and was the eleverest Aladdin in H. J. Byron's piece I remember to have seen. Miss Henrica.

Weakness, &c. therefrom: The legal revelations recently made in Bristolian idea was that she preferred the stage and independence. The city was, therefore, not a little surprised when she elected to accept the matrimonial proposals of a Mr. Pigeon, a lawyer and a widower with several children. Indeed, her more faithful admirers were scandalized at the lady's want of taste. By-and-by there were rumors of something even more worse than "incompatibility of temperament" disturbing the relationships of the newlymarried couple. It was said that Mr. Pigeon had actually beaten "that pretty little wife of his." A woman of spirit, Mrs. Pigeon (who had on her marriage retired from the stage) determined to resume her professional engagements, and she went to London. Some people said this step was rendered necessary on financial grounds.

After a short residence in London Mrs.

Pigeon's name became associated with that dered necessary on financial grounds.

The Life Association of America. Argued by John Hunter, Jr., gentleman of distinguished family connections. An application for divorce was made by Mrs. Pigeon. It was resisted by her husband, and did not succeed; but it was understood that a formal agreement of separation was made between the discontented wife and husband, whereby the latter received the solatium of an annual allowance. Mrs. Pigeon lived with Mr. Labouchere, and those who knew her story sympathized with her and justified her conduct. She became gradually known as anduct. She became gradually known as Mrs. Labouchere, and two or three years ago it was reported that Pigeon had died and his widow had indeed become Mrs.

Labouchere in the full acceptance of the strict letter of the law, the parties have not committed bigamy. The question as to Miss Hodson's real position was considered to be set at rest a year or two since by ner appearance in a trifling law-suit in a local court. The question at issue was one concerning the responsibility of Mrs. Labouchere for a small debt contracted through a certain "Laundry Company (Limited)," which she had started (somewhat after the manner of the New York Dress Associa-tion Company), but it was generally thought that the incident was merely arranged for the purpose of making known that Miss Hodson was in reality Mr. La-bouchere's wife. She was called into the witness-box and sworn as Henrietta Labouchere. The circumstance was much commented upon in general society, and the lady received cards from one or two families which had not previously recognized her. At Bristol, however, 1 happen to know that the death of Pigeon was questioned, and now it seems that the lady herself is in doubt upon this point, and suggests that pos-sibly the man has committed some crime, on account of which he has disappear-ed from England. He was never a prepossessing gentleman either in appearance or manners. Above the average height, he had red hair and whiskers. His position was that of a third- or fourth-rate solicitor, and he held a commission in the Bristol Volunteer Corps. His father was an old practitioner in the local police and county courts, and was much respected. The news of Mrs. Labouchere's proceedings at Richmond will fall "like a bombshelt" in professional society, and the inference will

Second Baptist Church. RECEPTION TO REV. W. W. AND MRS. LAND DRUM-ADDRESS ON THE EARLY HISTORY

OF THE CHURCH. In spite of the icy pavements and threat-ening clouds of last night there was a large attendance of the members of the Second Baptist church to give to Rev. W. W. and Mrs. Landrum the reception previously

Mr. J. B. Winston took the chair by as signment of the committee, and modestly said that he was chosen to the position "rather as a mark of their favor than as an evidence of their wisdom." He stated that the object of the gathering was to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Landrum, not only "to the confraternity of our church, but to our

was then sung by the choir and congrega-tion, after which Mr. Jackson B. Wood offered prayer and Mr. Winston read from the twenty-third Psalm: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." Then was sung the hymn, "Take the Name of Jesus With You.

Mr. Winston sald that the committee in selecting a theme for this occasion were led to believe that a history of the church "would unite the hearts, quicken the zeal, and promote its best interests." For that duty they had selected a brother conspicu-ous for valuable and faithful services. Saying that much, he was sure his hearer would anticipate an address from Mr. H. K. Ellyson, whom he asked to take the

Mr. Ellyson, protesting that a more skil-ful hand ought to have been selected to draw the picture of the struggles and suc-cesses of the founders of their spiritual temple, proceeded to give an outline sketch of the organization of the church in the of the organization of the church in the old brick house on Third street on the 5th day of May, 1820. The public constitution of the church in the second story of Brown's building, which then stood on the lot where the National Bank of Virginia building now stands, and the removal into their house of worship, which was erected in 1822 on a lot on Eleventh street in rear of the Merchants National Bank building, were graphically described. Then followed a brief sketch of Rev. James B. Taylor's ministry of thirteen years, during which the membership increased from 37 to 458; three new churches were formed.

mainly of the members of the Second church, Grace-Street Baptist church, wholly of the members of this church, with one exception; ten young men of the church entered the ministry, and a lot was purchased for a larger and better-located house of worship.

Rev. E. L. Magoon succeeded Dr. Taylor in August, 1839. There were many additions during his pastorate; the Sunday school was more than doubled, and was the largest in the city; the colored members were organized into the Second African church; several of the young men entered the ministry; the present house of worship was erected at a cost of over $40.-000, and when Dr. Magoon resigned there were 400 white members on the roll.

The speaker having here reached what he said might be called the boundary of the early days of the church, referred to some of the marked features of Christian life which had been developed during these twenty-six years. "My praying people," a term of endearment used of them by their first pastor, fitly described one of these features. Their loyalty to the principles they professed, their missionary spirit, their fraternal affection for each other, were some of the characteristics of this people. He then spoke of the ministers, deacons, women, and Sunday-school workers, who had made this an honored given Mr. Ellyson for his valuable and interesting address, and that he be requeste prepare the same for publication. He declared that there were facts in the address which, if Mr. Ellyson were to die, could be supplied by no other fiving man.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Winston said that he had been requested to make an address to the church, but at that late hour he thought the request would be more honored in the breach than in the observance, and he would therefore omit it. Rev. Mr. Landrum then took the platform, and acknowledged the interest with which he had heard the address of his venerable but yet ever fresh-hearted brother." Until this hour he did not know how much this church had done for the advancement of the cause of Christ. He went on to say with eloquence and unstudied grace of language that he did not believe that any church ever gave a pastor a more hearty welcome. The most that he hoped for after his days were ended here was that he might be thought worthy to have inscribed upon his tombstone "A Servant of God." "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" was suns with great heartiness, during which all the people came up and shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Landrum. After that all were invited into the lecture-room, from which the chairs had been removed and a supper spread under charge of a committee of ladies.

The supper was a nice one; there was be that to be a companion to Mrs. Langtry the greatest sociability, and the evening's entertainment closed, having been pleasant and agreeable to all present.

THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE OF The following is an extract from a letter written to the German Reformed Messenger, at Cham-

A BENEFACTRESS. Just open the door for her, and Mrs. Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the Nursery. Of this we are so sare that we will teach our "Susy" to say, "A blessing on Mrs. Winslow" for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colleking, and teething siege. MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP relieves the child from pain, and cares dysentery and diarrhoga. It softens the gums, reduces inflammation cures wind-colic, and carries the infant safely through the teething period. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it-no thing less. We have never seen Mrs. Winslowcnow her only through the preparation of her Soothing Syrup for Children Teething." If we had the power we would make her, as she is, a physical savior to the infant race. Sold by all
